

THINKING WORTH KNOWING

Evolving and Regenerating Ourselves

As we are reflecting on our 25th anniversary we find ourselves in a contemplative place. Our theory of change has evolved from a concentration on technical green building solutions, to the application of universal best practices in the form of rating systems, to a careful examination of what it means to be place-sourced. To truly source our thinking and actions from each unique place where we work. This leads us to reflect on the many ways that our work can serve as an instrument for healing both ecological and cultural wounds beyond the boundaries of our projects.

What affects do your projects have on the local ecosystem, on their neighborhoods, communities and socio-economic structures?

We launched our new web site to explore where we have been and where we are headed. View it at sevengroup.com
